

Feral Cats and Spay/Neuter Videos

The following two videos, produced by the College of Veterinary Medicine at Auburn University, can be very useful for veterinary practitioners and animal-care professionals. Ordering information is on the next page.

Working with Feral Cats in Practice

*An instructional video by Whitney Lemarr (class of 2005) and Dr. Brenda Griffin, College of Veterinary Medicine, Auburn University
© 2003, Biomedical Communications, Auburn University*

The purpose of this video is to provide veterinary practitioners with the information and techniques required to assist clients with management of feral cats using the method known as trap/neuter/return (TNR).

This video includes:

1. An overview of feline overpopulation and methods of control, including TNR
2. Detailed descriptions of feral cat trapping and holding procedures, and precise step-by-step instructions on how to anesthetize and treat feral cats in veterinary practice
3. An overview of how to establish and run a large-scale TNR operation

The video describes in detail issues and techniques involved in working with feral cats. References for additional sources of information and equipment are included.

Promoting Pet Health and the Human-Animal Bond Through Spay/Neuter Counseling

*An educational video by Kim Smith (class of 2004) and Dr. Brenda Griffin, College of Veterinary Medicine, Auburn University
© 2003, Biomedical Communications, Auburn University*

This video and accompanying printed materials are designed to help veterinary and animal-care professionals as they prepare to counsel clients about this essential topic. The video consists of general background and medical information on sterilization followed by realistic scenarios that are frequently encountered in practice. The video illustrates diplomatic and medically sound counseling techniques that inform and reassure clients as they elect to spay or neuter their pets.

Scenario I: Risky Business. Miss Hammond is concerned the surgery will be too traumatic for her beloved pet and really doesn't see the need to spay.

Scenario II: Cut Off His What?! Mr. Heath fears neutering will change his pet in some way.

Scenario III: How Much Is the Doggie in the Window? Mrs. Smith is ready to make some money by breeding her purebred dog.

Scenario IV: Just One Litter. Miss Lowe feels it is best for her cat to have a litter of kittens first. She would also like to teach her children about the Miracle of Birth.

Scenario V: Pound Puppies. Mr. Allen adopted his dog from the shelter and doesn't see the need for the spay contract.

Scenario VI: The Cat Lady. Miss Green is feeding some feral cats and needs some advice from her veterinarian.
